Mr. Carlile and the Vice Presidency. The Clarksburg News in the course of its obituary notice of the late John S. Carlile, says that in 1864 Mr. Carlile was promi-nently spoken of as a candidate for Vice President on the Republican ticket. "This nomination," it remarks, "would have made Mr. Carlile President Instead of An-The premises are wrong in the conclusion drawn by the News, Mr. Carlile was never spoken of to the best of our recollection in connection with the second place on the Republican Presidential ticket in 1864. He had put himself at outs with the Republican party in the summer of 1862, and in 1864 was opposing the party. If he had been all right with the Republi-cans he would have been returned as his own successor to the United States Senate at the election by the first New State Legislature in 1863, but the fact that he was wholly ignored in that election shows that he was not thought of for any higher position in the Republican party,

With every disposition to be just to Mr.

Carlile's public life, let us at the same time be just to the truth of history.

banks would have no right to complain. Or the interest on the security bonds deposited in Washington might be withheld and this much gained to the Government whenever the banks are furnished with currency, and in case the currency is vielded up then to be a plan an elastic currency would be secured which at the same time would not be open to the objection of costing the people double interest. Yet this would not be foreign that it would lack the "flat" principle. Still it might be a very good plan upon which to base a compromise between the two extremes represented by the advocates of an extensive issue of "the house of the National banks.

But, says the Gazette, this might be don ernment. It remains out in active or dull times unless funded into a convertible bond, such as the Gazette proposes, in which case the government is compelled to pay interest as now on a bond, and hence nothing is gained.

But the great objection is that it converts the government into a bank of issue, contrary to all the warnings laid down by such acknowledged financiers as Alexander Hamilton, and makes the volume of our money dependent on the caprices of the Ben Butlers and Ben Wilsons who may stump the country on Bill Allen's "idee" of "more money and less misery," and thus get themselves elected by promising to inflate the currency an additional hundred millions or two. There would be no stop to such issues of the government. Price would rise as every fresh issue was put the wants of trade would be imperative from Congress to Congress.

The Iron Market.

The Pittsburgh Manufacturer of yesterday reports a continuance of the "fairly good demand" for pig iron of the better grades and quotes prices of "mill red short" at $18 The market for old rails is reported

'easier" at $23, with an unwillingness o the part of buyers to go above $22. In regard to the pig metal market, the Manufacturer discourses as follows:

"Dealers report that transactions foot up about the same as for some weeks past. Prices have undergone no change whatever, but strictly red-short iron continues very firm and in good demand at our quotations. Most of the red-short iron that comes to this marketis made in the Shenango valler, where another furnace has blown in, after having gone out for repairs some time during the summer. The furnaces in the eastern part of the State are having a better demand for their product than those in the west. Letters from pig manufacturers in the region from Altoona "Dealers report that transactions foot u manufacturers in the region from Altoon to Reading to dealers here show that mos of the furnaces that are in blast are selling their iron as fast as they can make it, while some are sold ahead to April, and at while some are soft aneau to Apri., and a better prices at the furnace than could be obtained here, delivered. This will, o course, be good news to western furnace owners, as it relieves them of a competi-tion that was felt to some extent not long ago. These letters state that some o obtained here, delivered. This will, of course, be good news to western furnace owners, as it relieves them of a competition that was felt to some extent not long less that the National banking system is the best and safest of any banking system is the best and safest of any banking system we have ever had which involved the right of issuing notes. But wouldn't the same safety be secured by retaining the present system, only so amended as to withdraw the privilege of circulation? Then so much of the taxes as are imposed on the circulation could be taken off, and, the banks would have no right to complain.
